

Publication Ethics Notification

The JPMA abides by the COPE and ICMJE guidelines on ethics in research and publications. This includes the ethical approval for the research by the Institutional Review Board and fulfilling the authorship criteria. The authors and their parent institutions have given assurance that the articles submitted for publication in this supplement have followed and complied with research and best practices in publication ethics. Any concerns about potential errors, pertaining to research or publication ethics of articles published in this special issue should be directly addressed to the corresponding authors at their respective e-mail addresses.

Readers should not approach the editorial office for such concerns.
